

Last of "Light Brigade"

ELLIS CUTTING, SURVIVOR OF GALLANT SIX HUNDRED.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Oct. 2.—Ellis Cutting, sole survivor of the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade," rode unscathed through the gallant but futile action—to be hurt by a snow plow near here.

Today, 48 years after the immortal execution of blundered orders, Cutting, 85, is alive and alert. He recalls as though it were yesterday the charge at Balaklava, in which he participated as a youth of 17, the charge Tennyson's poem immortalized.

With the Crimean war in progress—British and France allied with Turkey against Russia—the Russians attacked the allies at Balaklava, Oct. 25, 1854, hoping to cut all communications.

The "Heavy Brigade" of British cavalry made a furious charge, swept back the attackers and drove them back behind their own artillery.

Blunder Apparent.

The "Light Brigade," commanded by Lord Cardigan, then received orders to charge these cannon and prevent their removal. For cavalry, mounted and armed with lances and sabres, "charge cannon was plain folly," Lord Cardigan read the "order" the aide delivering.

CANVASS SHOWS VARIED RAIL BOARD OPINION

By J. HART CAMPBELL.
(U. S. Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Congress is certain to split on the moot question of what constitutes a "living wage" just as did the railroad labor board, according to a canvass of opinion obtained in congressional circles today.

The open advocacy of the abolition of the board by Secy of Labor James J. Davis, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and a great number of senators and congressmen, is expected to lead to definite action along this line early in the new session a congress which gets under way the middle of this month.

While there is widespread and insistent demand for abolishing the board, particularly since it's pronouncement on the "living wage," the board nevertheless has drawn some support of its position in the rank and file of congress.

Sen. McCumber of North Dakota and Sen. Myers, Democrat, of Montana, were among those today who said if congress established a "living wage" it must also take into consideration producers and consumers as well as railroad workers.

"Labor is now receiving the highest wages ever paid in this country," said Sen. Myers. "There has been only a slight reduction from the wages of war time—in some lines no reduction at all."

"However in fixing wages, so far as the government may have the right and power to fix them, laborers are not the only ones to be regarded. The condition of business and the welfare of all our people must also be taken into consideration."

"We are in a transition period undulating a process of readjustment. All branches of business, industry and consumers have suffered. Labor should bear its full share of the burden. Railroads cannot be expected to pay more than they earn. To grant now all classes of railroad labor what labor experts and theorists call a "living wage" would bankrupt the railroads, raise rates to a ruinous height, paralyze industry, crush the farmers, hit hard the consumers and demoralize business generally."

Oct. 26, Nov. 2,

room, where he had just had Grandpa Wheelock, the heavy gentleman, put in a new bath tub, with hot and cold running water and everything.

The bunny gentleman mixed up some soapy lather to rub in his whiskers, so they would shave off more easily, and as he lathered his face he whistled a jolly little tune.

But when Uncle Wiggily began to shave himself with the razor, he stopped whistling.

"For," said the bunny to himself, "if I pucker up my lips to whistle I may cut off the tip of my pink, twinkling nose, and I don't want to do that."

So he kept quiet when he was using the razor.

But when the bunny gentleman had filled the tub with warm, soapy water, and was splashing away in it, he began to sing. It is a good sign, you know, to sing in your bath. It shows that you are happy and healthy and there is nothing better in this world.

This is what Uncle Wiggily sang: "I love to sozzle in the suds. And later up the soap. It floats around my bath tub white As if it were a boat."

I sometimes drop soap on the floor Then back and forth it goes. If I should step on it I would Fall tumbling on my nose."

And Uncle Wiggily didn't want to do that, because if he fell on his pink nose it might never twinkle again, and that would be a dreadful thing to have happen, wouldn't it? But everything turned out all right, and soon Uncle Wiggily, sweet and clean, was putting on fresh clothes to go seek an adventure.

"I wonder what will happen to me today?" thought the bunny as he let the water gurgle out of the bath tub. "I hope I have a most jolly adventure, and I hope—"

Uncle Wiggily suddenly stopped talking to himself and listened. He heard a noise downstairs in his hollow stump bungalow.

"Is that you, Nurse Jane—back so soon?" asked the bunny. "I thought you were to be gone all day. I haven't gone out yet."

"Well, you don't need to go out—that is until after I have nibbled your ears," growled a harsh voice, and Uncle Wiggily was so frightened that he dropped one shoe he was about to put on.

"It's the Bear!" whispered the bunny. "The Bushy Bear!" "Tramp! Shuffle! Bump!" sounded footsteps on the stairs.

It was the Bear coming up. "Oh, there you are," cried the Bear as he saw Uncle Wiggily in the bath room. "What have you been doing?" asked the Bear. "And what is that shiny white thing in the middle of the room?"

"That," answered the bunny, "is my bath tub, a new one I just had put in. Don't you ever take a bath, Mr. Bear?" inquired the bunny. For he had a wild hope in his heart that he might play some trick on the bear by means of the bath tub.

"Oh, yes, I take a bath," growled the Bear. "But I stand under a waterfall, or I jump in some river or lake for my bath."

"Doesn't it make you hungry to take a bath?" went on Uncle Wiggily.

"Yes, it does," growled the Bear. "I am hungry for your ears, but I think I would be more hungry if I took a bath in your new tub. Here, show me how you take a bath in a tub."

"Oh, this is just what I wanted to happen!" thought the bunny. "I'll fix this Bear so he won't nibble my ears today!"

"How do you take a bath?" growled the shaggy creature.

"Well," answered Uncle Wiggily, "you take off your clothes, get in the tub and sozzle yourself with soap and warm water. Here, this is where you turn on the water," and the bunny showed the Bear the shiny faucets, one marked hot and the other cold. "I think I've used up all the hot water," said Uncle Wiggily, "so I'll go downstairs and light the gas heater. Then you'll have warm water for your bath. Turn this faucet for the warm water and this for the cold," said Uncle Wiggily, but he played a trick on the Bear.

For the bunny pointed to the faucet marked hot and said that was the cold one.

"Well, hurry and light the heater," growled the Bear. "After I take a bath I'll nibble your ears. And, mind you, don't you dare run away when I'm taking a bath."

Uncle Wiggily said he wouldn't. The bunny made the water sizzling hot and called to the Bear. "Get in the tub and turn on the cold water first." The Bear got in the tub. He turned the faucet marked hot, for he thought that was cold, and a moment later such a howling came from that bathroom.

"Oh, widdle widdle, wiffy-wuff," howled the bear as the hot water splashed on him. "Tim on fire! I'm all scolded! And out of the window he jumped to find a cold spring of water into which to jump. So he didn't nibble any ears that day.

"Hal Hal!" laughed Uncle Wiggily as he turned off the hot water. "Bathtubs are very useful things to have in a bungalow."

And if the jumping Jack doesn't put a pin in the rag doll's bed, to scratch her all up and make her look as though she had the measles, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the thorn bush.

Uncle Wiggily

"I think," said Uncle Wiggily to himself one afternoon, when he was all alone in his hollow stump bungalow, "I think I shall shave, take a bath and then go out and look for an adventure. By that time Nurse Jane will be home to get supper, and I shall have a fine appetite. Taking a bath always makes me hungry."

GETTING UP NIGHTS

E. E. Mullen, No. Kenova, Ohio, says: "For 10 years I have been troubled with kidneys and bladder. I had to get up 5 or 6 times each night. I had taken many kinds of medicine, but Lithiated Buchu (Kaiser formula) is the only kind that gave me any relief. My bladder is normal and I have only used the remedy for three weeks. If you want further facts, write me." Lithiated Buchu (Kaiser formula) acts on the kidneys and bladder like Epsom Salts on the bowels. It cleans them out, relieving the bladder of many abnormal deposits. These tablets cost 25¢ apiece. The price makes it possible to place in the formula several drugs which are useful for relief. The formula is on the package. It is not likely you have ever taken anything similar. Try a few tablets for backache, swelling, scanty or high-colored urine, and frequent desires at night. Be sure to get the Kaiser formula Lithiated Buchu at all drug stores, or write Kaiser Laboratories, Mechanicsburg, O., or locally at Bastian's Drug Store, Central Drug Store, Western Drug Store, South Bend, and Opera Drug Store, Fremont, and Drug Store, Elkhart, Ind.
